INTRODUCTION

One definition of a government document is "Any paper, map, pamphlet or book, manuscript or printed, originating in, or printed with the imprint of, or at the expense, or by the authority of any office of a legally organized government". For the purposes of this study only those pamphlets or books which have been printed with the imprint of, or at the expense of, or by authority of any one of the three governments of the Maritime provinces, namely, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island have been included. The publications of each province have been listed separately. However a few publications have been issued jointly by the three provinces. These are listed in a section at the end of the study. Papers, broadsides, handbills, proclamations, and maps have not been included. Manuscripts have been included only when they preceded a document which at a later date was printed.

The judicial and municipal aspects of government have not been included as they would provide a study in themselves.

Reports, despatches, and other documents which have appeared in the appendix to the Journals of the Council and Assembly, but have not had a separate existence have not been listed. Individual laws and statutes which are an exact reporting of those appearing in the annual volume of laws issued by the government have not been included.

As there is no complete record of the publications of any of the three governments in any one place the collection of the material listed has been exceedingly difficult and is probably incomplete. The sources from which the material has been collected are the Legislative Libraries of the three provinces; The Nova Scotia Public Archives; Acadia University Library (Eric Dennis collection); The New Brunswick Museum; Mount Allison University Memorial Library; The Toronto Public Library (A Bibliography of Canadiana); Canada. Public Archives (Catalogue of pamphlets 1493-1931); Tremaine, M. (Canadian imprints 1752-1800); Library of Congress Printed Catalog; University of Chicago Libraries; University of Michigan Libraries. In addition a number of government departments in both Nova Scotia and New Brunswick were visited and numerous letters were written to the departments in an effort to check the publications. In some instances the departments could not give any information going beyond the past twenty-five years.

The general plan of this study has been to arrange the provinces in chronological order of the establishment of an independent government. Under each province the following arrangement has been made: 1. A foreword which contains in brief outline the constitutional development of the province with a table of Assemblies, and the history of the King's Printer branch; 2. The publications of the Legislature, which includes debates, journals, statutes, and commissions which are not a part of any Department; 3. The publications of the Executive which includes the history of the official newspapers, followed by the various departments arranged in alphabetical order. Within each department, after an outline of the growth of the department, the publications are divided into two groups—serial and special publications; 4. (a) By Authority. A number of publications issued by the authority of the government, but not belonging to any of the above categories. (b) Miscellaneous. Publications written by a member of the government, published by the King's printer but not shown as published by the authority of the Legislature.

The Bibliography contains only a list of the sources consulted which do not come within the category of a government publication.

The Index is an author title, but not a subject listing.

There have been a number of changes in the formation of departments, particularly in Nova Scotia. The publications which have had a continuous existence through several changes of departments have been listed, with the history of the changes under the department in which they appeared in 1952. Reference is made in the history of the other department to the fact that at one time a particular branch was with that department.

While a list of sources from which information has been obtained, is given in the bibliography, special acknowledgment of thanks goes to Miss Jean Gill, Librarian, Legislation and Charlottetown Public Library; Dr. D. C. Harvey, Archivist, Nova Scotia Public Archives and staff; Miss Annie Donohue, Librarian, Nova Scotia Legislative Library; Douglas C. Lochhead, Librarian, Dalhousie University Library; H. W. Ganong, Librarian, Acadia University Library; Miss Margaret Evans, Librarian, New Brunswick Museum; Maurice P. Boone, Librarian, New Brunswick Legislative Library; C. E. Burden, Queen's Printer, New Brunswick; and Harold Greer, Assistant Librarian, Mount Allison University Memorial Library, who have given freely of their time to check information.

Special acknowledgement of thanks also goes to Dr. Jean Lunn, National Library, for her assistance in checking the manuscript and format.

Without the help and inspiration of Dr. D. G. G. Kerr, Professor of History, Mount Allison University, this work, the basis of which was partial requirement for a Master's degree at Mount Allison University, would not have been undertaken. Grateful acknowledgement and thanks are made to him for the many hours spent checking the manuscript and for the valuable criticism offered.

NOVA SCOTIA

FOREWORD

According to Icelandic sagas, settlers from Greenland first touched the shores of Nova Scotia in 986. It was not, however, until John Cabot discovered Cape Breton Island in 1497 and claimed the territory for the King of England that we have an historical record of an European landing in what is now the Maritimes Provinces. England viewed the discovery with indifference and therefore did not attempt to colonize. On November 8, 1603 Henry IV of France, by virtue of Jacques Cartier's claim, issued a patent to Sieur de Monts which gave him the right to colonize. In 1604 de Monts, accompanied by Champlain, entered the harbour at Port Royal, but not seeing the advantages at this time proceeded westward, coasting along the shores of the Bay of Fundy until he reached the St. Croix river where he attempted to form a settlement. The winter was hard and in the spring of 1605 the settlers returned to Port Royal where they established a colony.

In 1621 by virtue of John Cabot's claim, James I of England granted to Sir William Alexander the peninsula of Acadia, together with Cape Breton and all the country north of the Bay of Fundy to the River St. Lawrence. However Alexander's attempt to colonize ended in failure, and the French were left in control of Acadia.

In 1672, France placed Acadia, (New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Cape Breton Island) for purposes of government under the jurisdiction of the Governor at Quebec. When the Treaty of Utrecht was signed in 1713, Acadia was ceded by France to Great Britain as part of the terms of settlement.

England was now faced with the problem of the type of government for Acadia, for the newly acquired territory could not be brought into England's constitutional framework, since, according to English law, no Catholic, whether living at home or in the colonies, could exercise the right of franchise. Since there could not be an elected General Assembly, a scheme was devised of vesting all power in the Governor. "He appointed the Council of twelve, and might remove or suspend any member for due cause. He could levy forces and wage war against foreign enemies or domestic insurrection; he could, at his discretion, put to death or keep and preserve alive any prisoners; and he could adjudge and settle all claims and disputes in regard to land. Finally he was empowered to do what further might be necessary for the security of the province, and he was to hold office during the King's pleasure. The functions of the Council were chiefly advisory."¹ Annapolis Royal was selected as the seat of government.

Not placing too high a value on this colony England returned Cape Breton Island to France in 1748, under the terms of the Treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle.

The following year Cornwallis was commissioned as Governor of Acadia. It is interesting to note that his commission provided for a constitutional government consisting of a Governor, an appointed Council, and an elected Assembly. However it was not until February 7, 1750 that the Governor and Council passed a resolution providing for the election of an Assembly of sixteen members. In the meantime Halifax had been made the capital of Acadia, and the seat of government was transferred in 1751 from Annapolis Royal to the new capital. The General Assembly met for the first time on October 2, 1758. This is significant as it was the first elected legislative body in British North America. The members gave their services without fees.

In 1763, by the terms of the Treaty of Paris which ended the Seven Year's War, Cape Breton was restored to Great Britain. In addition France ceded Prince Edward Island as well as the other islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence to Great Britain. The newly acquired territory was placed under the administration of the Governor at Halifax.

In 1769, when Prince Edward Island, upon petition of her proprietors, was granted a separate government, its constitutional framework was copied from Nova Scotia. Similarly when New Brunswick became independent in 1784 it adopted its constitution from Nova Scotia. However when Cape Breton was given a separate government in 1784 it was not granted a General Assembly. After much controversy the colony was re-annexed in 1820 to Nova Scotia.

The Council continued to act in both a legislative and an executive capacity until February 3, 1838 when it was divided into two distinct councils—an Executive Council and a Legislative Council. The Executive Council was an appointed council until 1848 when the House of Assembly obtained full control over all public revenues and brought the executive under its jurisdiction. The Legislative Council of fifteen members, appointed for life, was increased to twenty-one members in 1862. It remained an appointed council until its abolition in 1928. It had authority to initiate or amend all matters of legislation, with the exception of money or revenue bills.

The House of Assembly has a maximum existence of five years. Its thirty-seven members are elected on a general franchise.

KING'S PRINTER

The date of the appointment of the first Government Printer is not definitely known, but in 1752 the name of John Bushnell appeared as the printer on all official publications, and the following year 1753 he was listed as Printer to the Government. While the government paid for all printing it was not until 1773 that the printer was given a regular salary. In 1788 Henry, and his predecessors, who up until now had been termed Government Printers, were commissioned King's Printers. The duties were to publish the Journals of the House of Assembly, the newspapers carrying the Royal Proclamations, and such reports as were ordered to be printed by the Legislature.

By 1839 a great deal of dissatisfaction had grown up in the House of Assembly over what they considered the high cost of printing the Journals. A committee was appointed "on the subject of opening the printing for government and legislature to tender and contract". From 1842 to 1878 the printing of the Journals was let out to tender. The same tenderer might have the contract for printing the Journals over a period of several years and was known as Printer to the Assembly. Since 1878 the King's Printer has published the Journals.

In 1882 the position of King's Printer was given to the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines while a deputy was appointed to look after the actual work of the office. In 1934 the position was transferred from the Minister of Public Works and Mines to the Provincial Secretary.

The King's Printer is responsible for publishing all reports of the Executive as well as those of the Legislature.

An annual report on public printing has been issued since 1881.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE

The minutes of Council are in manuscript form, never having been printed.

The journal of Council called "Journals of His Majesty's Council in their legislature capacity in General Assembly convened" are to be found in manuscript form only from October 2, 1758 to 1830. They were published for each session of the Council from 1830 until its abolition in 1928. Commencing with the year 1836 an appendix containing reports, despatches, etc. was published with each journal.

The journals of the House of Assembly are in manuscript form only from October 2, 1758 to 1760. These journals are known as volume one. Since 1760 they have been published for each session of each Assembly. The title has been changed several times as follows: 1758-1763: Votes of the House of Assembly; 1764: Votes and Journals of the House of Assembly; 1765: A Journal of the Votes of the Lower House of Assembly; 1766-1786: Journal and Proceedings of the General Assembly; 1787- Journal and Proceedings of the House of Assembly. In 1830 the House of Assembly ordered that "reports of select committees, and other documents which may be laid on the table of this House, as, by the speaker, may be deemed proper, be printed separately in an appendix to the Journals, with convenient references thereto".¹ This policy has been continued. All annual reports are now published in the appendix to the journals. At first the index to the journals was published separately. However by 1784 the index was published with the journals.

The idea of publishing debates came at a much later date. In 1840 a committee was appointed by the House of Assembly to inquire into the best system of obtaining reports of debates. From that date until 1851 the debates appeared in a local newspaper. From 1851 to 1916 they were officially published. The debates of the Legislative Council were officially published from 1850 to 1922.

Statutes were published from 1758 for each session of the Assembly. In 1767 the first revision was made and the Statutes were separated into Perpetual Statutes and Temporary Statutes. From 1767 to 1797 Statutes continued to be issued under the two headings. No Perpetual Statutes were issued for the fourth session of the fifth Assembly (1773). In 1784 both types of Statutes were again revised. In 1805 the first volume of Statutes at Large was published. This work was a chronological listing of all Statutes passed between the years 1758 and 1804, and giving the content of the Statutes still in existence. At approximately ten year intervals three more volumes were issued. The first of the so-called revised Statutes appeared in 1851. There have been six more revisions, the last being in 1923. From 1758 to 1838 the Statutes were issued with a caption title only. Since 1839 a title page has been added.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE EXECUTIVE

When Nova Scotia became a British colony in 1713 with the signing of the Treaty of Utrecht, representative government could not be granted since most of the population were Catholic and according to British law did not have a franchise. To meet the situation the British government decided to set up a government based on the Norman Curia regis, with a Governor taking the place of the King and Council appointed in part by the British government and in part by the governor, to act as advisers. Of the first Council, only one, of the twelve appointed, was not connected with the garrison. It was not until 1749 when Edward Cornwallis received his commission of governorship that any change was contemplated. However by this time the Governor and Council were reluctant to give up the power they had enjoyed so it was not until 1758 that the first Assembly was called. Another ninety years were to pass before responsible government was granted.

Under responsible government the duties of the executive were increased. To handle a particular problem a committee or board or commission would be appointed. Eventually the board or commission would be made permanent with the head, called a Commissioner, becoming a member of the Executive. Gradually the commissions were replaced by departments.

When the British North America act was being drafted it was decided that certain problems should be Dominion while others would remain provincial. Consequently the following branches of government were handed over to the newly formed Dominion Government on July 1, 1867: Fisheries; Indian Affairs; Militia; Post Office; Railways; and Trade and Commerce.

There are other departments which now have either been absorbed by another department, or abolished. They are as follows: Department of Immigration and Industry, created 1923, abolished 1925; Department of Natural Resources, created 1925, abolished 1930.

In the Revised Statutes 1923, under the chapter on the Public Service, eight departments are listed with provision made for the creation of three more if it should be necessary. Today there are actually fourteen departments but in order to keep the Executive Council at eleven members, two departments are placed under the one minister in several instances. The composition of the government in 1952 is as follows:

Lieutenant Governor

Executive Council (11 members)

Premier and Provincial Treasurer

Provincial Secretary

Nova Scotia Board of Censors

Nova Scotia Housing Commission

Public Archives of Nova Scotia

Research Foundation of Nova Scotia

Minister of Highways and Public Works

Minister of Trade and Industry

Minister without portfolio (In charge of administration of Nova Scotia Liquor Control Act)

House of Assembly (37 members)

In addition to the regular departments there are a number of boards and commissions which are listed under the Department of Public Service. They issue annual reports which in the main are presented directly to the Lieutenant-Governor by the Chairman of the Board. These are: Nova Scotia Power Commission; Nova Scotia Liquor Commission; Civil Service Commission; and Tavern License Committee.¹

Gazettes

The forerunner of the Royal Gazette was first published on March 23, 1752 under the title of Halifax Gazette. The latter is the oldest newspaper to be published in what is now the Dominion of Canada. Its publisher, John Bushnell, came from Boston and set up business on Grafton Street, Halifax. In 1761 Bushnell sold out to Anthony Henry, who started a new series of the Gazette. Henry became involved with the authorities over the Stamp Act of 1766 and was forced to give up the official notices which were taken over by a Robert Fletcher, who was sent out from England to publish a semi-official newspaper. However by 1769 Henry was back in the field and started to publish the Nova Scotia Gazette and Weekly Chronicle, a semi-official newspaper which he published as King's printer. In 1789 Henry began the Royal Gazette and Nova Scotia Advertiser which became the semi-official newspaper. This was published until 1800, Henry having died in December 1800. In 1801 John Howe was appointed King's printer and began publishing the Nova Scotia Royal Gazette, which became the Royal Gazette in 1843. Up until the appearance of the Nova Scotia Royal Gazette in 1801 the newspapers mentioned were considered semi-official. They were, however, the only newspapers in which official notices could be published. The Nova Scotia Royal Gazette received official sanction.

Department of Agriculture and Marketing

The Central Agricultural Society of Nova Scotia was organized on December 15, 1818, at Halifax. Within two years twenty-five more agricultural societies were organized under the Central Agricultural Society. In 1864 a Board of Agriculture was organized, bringing all the societies under its control. The name of the Board was changed to that of the Central Board of Agriculture in 1871. A Secretary was appointed to act under the jurisdiction of the Governor-in-Council. In 1885 another re-organization took place when the Central Board was replaced by the Office of the Secretary of Agriculture. By an Order-in-Council of July 16th, 1925, all matters pertaining to agriculture were placed under the newly appointed Minister of Natural Resources, where they remained until 1930 when the Department of Agriculture was organized. In 1944 the title was again changed, this time to Department of Agriculture and Marketing. The work is now divided among the following nine branches: Agricultural Engineering Services; Animal and Poultry Services; Dairy Services; Horticulture and Biology Services; Field Crop Services; Immigration and Land Settlement Services; Extension Services; Marketing Services; and Chemistry, Soil and Fertilizers Services.

The first annual report was issued in 1841. In addition to the annual report of the department many of the branches issue pamphlets.

Department of Attorney-General

The office of Attorney-General dates from the establishment of representative government in Nova Scotia. The Attorney-General is the legal member of the Executive Council.

In 1857 when a Commissioner of Crown Lands was to be appointed the post was given to the Attorney-General. That post remained under the Attorney-General's Department until a reorganization took place in 1925 when Crown Lands became part of the newly formed Department of Lands and Forests.

In 1931 when a Superintendent of Neglected and Dependent Children was appointed, he became an officer of this department where he remained until 1934 when he, now called the Director of Child Welfare, was transferred to the Department of Public Health.

A Committee on Temperance was appointed in 1840 which carried on temperance work and issued a report until 1893. In 1911 an Inspector-in-Chief under the Nova Scotia temperance act was appointed to come under the jurisdiction of the Attorney-General's Department. This office was abolished when the Liquor Commission was established in 1930.

When a Director of Mothers' Allowances was appointed in 1930 he was placed under the jurisdiction of this Department where he remained until 1934 when he was transferred to the Department of Public Health.

In 1930 the Nova Scotia Police was established, replaced in 1933 by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police "H" Division. They were placed under the authority of the Attorney-General's Department.

A Registrar under the Securities Act was appointed in 1937 to act under the administration of this Department.

There is no report as such issued by this Department but the various Directors have issued reports on their own work. However since Temperance, the R.C.M.P. and the Registrar under the Securities act were the only branches which ceased to issue reports while still under this Department they will be the only ones listed here.

Department of Education

Early education in Nova Scotia was under the guidance of the church. In 1766 the first act concerning schools and schoolmasters was passed by the Nova Scotia Legislature. Provision was made for the setting aside of four hundred acres of land in each township for the use and support of schools. This act also stated that imprisonment and fine would be the fate of any teacher professing the popish faith.¹ Thus were the early schools under the jurisdiction of the Church of England. In 1780 an act was passed to establish a public school in Halifax.²

The first college to be established was King's college at Windsor in 1789. The act incorporating it forbade the members of the university to frequent the "Romish Mass or the meeting-houses of Presbyterians, Baptists, or Methodists, or the Conventicles of places of worship of any dissenters of the Church of England."³

In 1811 two education acts were passed: one for the establishment of a grammar school in ten of the most important districts⁴ and the other for the development of a common school system.⁵ It was not, however, until 1850 that the first Superintendent of education for Nova Scotia was appointed. In 1864 by another act the free school system was introduced. In 1949 the Council of Public Instruction was replaced by the Department of Education, and a Minister replaced the Superintendent of Education as the Chief Executive Officer.

For the more efficient carrying on of its work the Department has established the following divisions: Education Office; Teacher's Pension

Commission; Vocational Education; Adult Education; as well as a division entitled Special Officials.

In 1952 The Nova Scotia Museum of Science, which previously had been under the Department of Mines, was transferred to this Department.

In the appendix to the Journal of the House of Assembly are to be found abstracts of the returns of the several Boards of School Commissioners for the years 1833 to 1840. In 1841 the first annual report was published as well as the first issue of rules and regulations for the guidance of School Commissioners. Since that date various other reports have been published. In 1946 the Journal of Education was issued with an appendix of reports dealing with various phases of the work of the Education Office Division. Several of the other divisions also issued a variety of reports.

Department of Highways and Public Works

The Provincial Highways Board was created in 1917 with a Minister as the Chief Executive Officer. In 1926 the Board was changed to a Department. The former Department of Public Works and Mines was divided in 1938 and the Public Works section joined Highways to form the Department of Highways and Public Works. An annual report has been issued for Highways since 1918. Prior to 1938 the reports belonging to Public Works will be listed under the section called Department of Public Works.

Department of Industries and Immigration

In 1843 the House of Assembly ordered printed several despatches and a report of the Commissioners for Colonial Lands and Emigration. From then until 1907, when a Secretary of Industries and Immigration was appointed under the Provincial Secretary's Department, a number of reports were issued by individuals, and ordered to be printed by the government. The Office, which was changed to a Department in 1923, was abolished in 1925, when the Department of Natural Resources was established. From 1863 until 1876 an annual report was issued by the Immigration Agent. From 1907 until its abolition in 1925 an annual report was issued by the Department. For two more years reports were issued by the Department of Natural Resources.

Department of Labour

In 1932 a Department of Labour was established, taking over from the Department of Agriculture the Factories Inspector branch. Two years later the Minimum Wage Board, which had been established in 1931, was transferred from the Provincial Secretary's office to this Department. In 1934 its annual report is shown with that of the Department of Labour and in 1937 it was incorporated into that of the Department of Labour.

In 1938 the Workmen's Compensation Board, organized in 1917, was transferred from the Provincial Secretary's Office to this Department. It still issues its own report.

The Fire Marshal branch, organized in 1920 as the Fire Prevention Board, was transferred from the Provincial Secretary's office in 1941. This branch also issues its own annual report.

In addition to the above named Boards there is a Provincial Apprenticeship committee and a Board of Examiners Engine Operators act which come under the jurisdiction of this Department. These do not issue any reports.

Factories Inspector Branch

This branch was established in 1908 under the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines. When the Department of Natural Resources was organized in 1925 the branch was transferred to that Department. When this Department was abolished in 1929 the branch was transferred to the Department of Agriculture where it remained until the Department of Labour was organized in 1932. An annual report was issued from 1908 until it became a part of the Department of Labour, when its report was issued jointly with that of the Deputy Minister of Labour. In 1937 its report was incorporated into that of the Department of Labour.

Department of Lands and Forests

The first report for this Department dates back to 1831 when "An account of charges incurred by the Department of Crown Lands" was shown in the Appendix of the Journal of the House of Assembly. This report appeared annually until 1837. In 1838 a report was made by the Committee on Crown Lands. Between 1839 and 1842 there was no report. By 1847 a Commissioner had been appointed who had published in the Appendix an "Abstract of Returns and Accounts". This report continued until 1856. In 1857 an annual report of the Commissioner of Crown Lands, who was also the Attorney-General, was issued for the first time. This report was changed in 1923 to become the annual report of the Department of Crown Lands. In 1925 the name was changed from Department of Crown Lands to that of the Department of Lands and Forests, and became independent of the Attorney-General's Department. The Minister replaced the Commissioner of Crown Lands and the Commissioner of Forests and Game.

Department of Mines

The first report to be issued by this Department was in 1847 when a Committee on Mines and Minerals made a report to the House of Assembly. In 1858 the Inspector of Mines began an annual report. The Inspector's report continued but in 1864 he made it to the Chief Commissioner of Mines. The following year it became the annual report of the Department of Mines. Mines and Public Works at this time were under the same Commissioner who was known as the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines. In 1939 the two were separated with Mines becoming an independent Department and Public Works joining Highways to form the Department of Highways and Public Works. The reports dealing with Mines will be listed in this section while those dealing with Public Works will be listed under the heading of that Department.

Department of Municipal Affairs

In 1892 a conference was held on Municipal Affairs. Three years later an act was passed in which it was stated that ten days before a session of the Legislature, the Municipality must send an abstract of receipts and expenditures to the Provincial Secretary to be laid before the Legislature. In 1919 a further act was passed reiterating the statement regarding receipts and expenditures. Another act was passed in 1935 which created the Department of Municipal Affairs. Various reports have been published since 1899.

A Commissioner of Municipal Sinking Fund was appointed in 1909. He issued two reports.

Department of Natural Resources

The Department of Natural Resources was organized under an Order-in-Council bearing date July 16th 1925. At the 1926 session of the Legislature of Nova Scotia amendments and additions to the Public Statutes of the province were passed giving to the Minister of Natural Resources supervision, direction and control of all matters relating to agriculture, land settlement, industrial development, public health, vital statistics and the collection and dissemination of all facts and statistics relating to the agricultural, industrial and other resources of the province. In 1928 the Bureau of Information was transferred to the Department of Highways with the creation two years later of the Departments of Agriculture and Public Health, the Department of Natural Resources was abolished. An annual report was issued which included the report of Agriculture. Public Health continued to issue its own annual report. The report of the Secretary of Industries and Immigration, which previous to 1925 had been the report of the Department of Industries and Immigration and had been issued by the Provincial Secretary's Department, now became the Report of the Agent-General. However only one number of each was published.

Department of Provincial Secretary

The Office of Provincial Secretary was among those created when the first Council was sworn in. Until 1934 the Provincial Secretary also held the Office of Provincial Treasurer. No annual report was issued by the Provincial Secretary until 1890. The following Departments when first organized were placed under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Secretary: Secretary of Industries and Immigration, organized in 1907, transferred in 1923 to the Department of Industries and Immigration; the Minimum Wage Board, organized in 1931, transferred in 1934 to the Department of Labour; The Workmen's Compensation Board, organized in 1917, transferred in 1938 to the Department of Labour; the Fire Marshal Branch, organized in 1920, transferred in 1941 to the Department of Labour; Provincial Board of Health, organized in 1893, transferred in 1931 to the Department of Public Health.

The King's Printer division was transferred from the Department of Public Works and Mines to that of Provincial Secretary in 1934.

Public Archives, formerly Public Records, organized in 1857, remained with the Department of Provincial Secretary when this Department was divided.

When the Inspector of Rural Telephone Lines was appointed in 1913 he was placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Provincial Secretary.

The publications of the branches transferred from this Department will be listed under their present Department.

As early as 1802 a Committee was appointed for the purpose of examining the Public Accounts. This Committee was to act jointly with a Committee of His Majesty's Council. From the date of its appointment up to 1829 their joint report was printed in the Journals of the House of Assembly. From 1830 when an appendix appeared to the Journals the report was printed in the appendix. Beginning in 1861 Financial Returns were issued annually and in 1915 the title was changed to Public accounts. From the establishment of a government in Nova Scotia up to 1934 the Office of Provincial Treasurer was a part of the Office of Provincial Secretary.

Department of Public Charities

In 1878 a Board of Commissioners of Public Charities was established, bringing under its jurisdiction the Nova Scotia Hospital, at that time called the Hospital for the Insane; and the Victoria General Hospital. In 1884 the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities became the Charities Department under the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines where it remained until 1910 when it became an independent Department. In 1929 it was brought once more under Public Works and Mines—this time a Minister instead of a Commissioner.

When the Nova Scotia Sanatorium was organized in 1904 and the Humane Institutions in 1912 they were placed under this Department. As all the branches of this Department have outlived the Department their publications will be listed elsewhere. Before it became an independent Department the Commissioners issued an annual report.

Department of Public Health

Prior to 1893 when the Provincial Board of Health was organized, the problem of health was a local matter. In 1904 the Board was changed to a Department, but remained as part of the Department of Provincial Secretary. In 1918 a Public Health Officer was appointed. In 1931 a further act made the Department of Health an independent Department, and the Public Health Officer was replaced by a Minister of Public Health. By the same act the following branches of the Department of Public Works and Mines were transferred to this Department: Humane Institutions; Nova Scotia Sanatorium; Victoria General Hospital; and the Nova Scotia Hospital. In 1934 certain divisions which heretofore had been under the Department of Attorney-General were transferred, namely: Penal Institutions; Child Welfare; and Mothers' Allowances. In 1933 when the Old Age Pensions Board was established it was placed under this Department.

In 1944 when the Department of Public Welfare was established the following branches of the Department of Public Health were transferred to that Department: Child Welfare; Mothers' Allowances; and Old Age Pensions.

In 1946 when Roseway Hospital at Shelburne, and 1949 Point Edward Hospital at Sydney were opened they were placed under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Health.

In 1950 the Bureau of Information was transferred from the Department of Trade and Industry.

Only the publications for the divisions which are at the present time part of this Department are listed here.

Humane and Penal Institutions

In 1901 an Inspector of Humane and Penal Institutions was appointed and placed under the jurisdiction of the Attorney-General's Department. In 1912 the two institutions were separated, with each being given its own Inspector. Penal Institutions remained with the Attorney-General's Department until 1934 when it was transferred to the Department of Public Health. Humane Institutions upon being given a separate existence was placed under the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines, Charities Department, where it remained until 1931, when it was transferred to the Department of Public Health.

Each section issued an annual report.

Hospitals

Nova Scotia Hospital.

In 1846 a report was made by the Commissioners for the Lunatic Asylum. However it was not until 1858 that an annual report was made by the Commissioner of the Hospital for Insane. In 1861 this Commissioner was placed under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of the Board of Public Works. In 1878 when the Board of Commissioners of Public Charities was organized the hospital was transferred to it. However in 1884 Public Charities became a Department under the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines. In 1901 the name was changed from Hospital for Insane to that of the Nova Scotia Hospital. It however remained under the Commissioner of Public Works, Charities Department, until 1931 when it was transferred to the Department of Public Health.

Publicity

In 1922 a Tourist Association was organized. They issued one report which they called an annual report. Thereafter their reports appeared as part of the annual report only of the Department concerned, until 1950 when they once more issued a separate report. In 1924 a Publicity Bureau was brought into being by an act of the Nova Scotia Legislature. The following year when the Department of Natural Resources was organized the Publicity Bureau was placed under its jurisdiction. Two years later it was transferred to the Department of Highways and in 1941 when the Department of Industry and Publicity was organized the Bureau was transferred to that Department. On August 31, 1950 when Hon. Harold Connelly became Minister of Health the Bureau which had been under his jurisdiction was transferred to the Department of Public Health. A number of publications dealing with the various phases of information for tourists have been issued. These will be listed in departmental sequence since many of the publications have no date.

Department of Public Services

There are a number of Boards and Commissions which for purposes of administration are listed under the Department of Public Services. This is not a Department in the true sense of the word as it is not presided over by a Minister as are the other Departments. Each Board or Commission presents an annual report to the government. Some of the reports are presented directly to the Lieutenant-Governor by the Chairman of the Board while others are presented to one of the members of the Executive who in turn presents it to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Civil Service Commission

While a Civil Service Commission was established in 1935 it was not until 1943 that a report was issued. This annual report is presented to the House by the Provincial Secretary.

Nova Scotia Library Commission

In 1859 Mr. T. B. Akins made a report to the House of Assembly respecting the formation of a Provincial Library. As a result of this report, a Joint Committee of the Legislative Council and the House of Assembly was established in 1862. In 1880 a Nova Scotia Library Commission replaced the Joint Committee on the Legislative Library. Annual reports have been issued since 1862, which are presented directly to the Lieutenant-Governor by the Commissioners.

Department of Public Works

A Board of Works was established in 1852 with a Chairman in charge. From that date until 1867 a report was made to the House of Assembly and appeared in the Appendix to the Journals. In 1871 a Commissioner was appointed to be known as the Commissioner of Public Works and Mines.

In 1877 a Provincial Engineer was appointed who issued an annual report for some years.

A Roads Division issued annual reports for some time.

In 1882 the Office of King's printer was made part of the Office of Commissioner of Public Works and Mines where it remained until 1934 when it was transferred to the Department of Provincial Secretary.

In 1921 the Commissioner was replaced by a Minister.

When the Nova Scotia Museum of Science was re-organized in 1900 it was placed under the Commissioner of Public Works where it remained until 1938 when it was placed under Mines.

In 1938 the Department of Public Works and Mines was separated. Mines became an independent Department. Public Works joined Highways to form a Department to be known as Highways and Public Works. Only those publications which deal with Public Works will be listed here. Publications dealing with Mines will be listed under that Department while those dealing with Highways will be under that Department.

Fisheries

That fisheries played an important part in the history of the Atlantic provinces during the middle of the nineteenth century is to be seen from the various acts passed by both the Imperial and Provincial governments and by the various pamphlets written on the subjects.

Indian Affairs

In 1842 a Commissioner for Indian Affairs was appointed for the western portion of the province. Three years later a Commissioner was appointed for Cape Breton. Each Commissioner issued an annual report until 1862 when the two positions were merged and one Commissioner was appointed to look after both the mainland and Cape Breton Island. In 1867 Indian Affairs was taken over by the newly formed Dominion government.

Militia

The first report to be found dealing with the Militia is called a General Return of the Number of Militia in the Province of Nova Scotia from 1827 to 1836. There were no further reports until 1861 when the Adjutant General's Office began issuing an annual report. The last report to be issued by this office was for 1866 as the Militia was taken over by the newly formed Dominion government in 1867. The first record of rules and regulations to be found was one issued in 1808.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

FOREWORD

The first European to land on L'Isle de St. Jean was Jacques Cartier, who sailed into the Gulf of St. Lawrence in June 1534 in his search for a North-West passage to China. He claimed the Island for the King of France. It was not, however, until one hundred and fifty years later that the King of France decided to cede the right of fishing and settlement on the Island and there is still doubt about the name of the individual obtaining these rights. The Island remained in French hands until the Treaty of Paris in 1763 when, along with Canada, Nova Scotia and the other islands in the Gulf and River St. Lawrence, it was given to Great Britain, and for purposes of government annexed to Nova Scotia. The proprietors of the Island who in 1763 had been granted lots of land by virtue of their claim on the British government, either through military or other service, four years later petitioned the King for a separate government. On June 28, 1769 the petition was granted and on July 10 Walter Patterson was appointed first Captain-General and Governor-in-Chief of St. John Island. In his commission of governorship, Patterson had outlined for him his duties as follows: He was to govern with the advice and consent of an appointed Council and an elected Assembly; prorogue or dissolve the Legislature; authorize the constitution of the courts; and grant pardon. Patterson arrived on the Island on August 30, 1770 and was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor on September 19. At the same time his Council of four (1. A Provincial Secretary-Treasurer and Registrar General, 2. Attorney-General, 3. A Clerk of the Crown and Coroner, and 4. Provost Marshal) was sworn in.

Two and a half years elapsed before the Council decided, at a meeting held on February 17th, 1773, the constitution of the House of Assembly. All qualifications were waived, except those of being Protestant and resident, and the number of members was limited to eighteen. The first Assembly met in July 1773 when thirteen acts were passed.

By Statute of the General Assembly, which received Royal assent February 1, 1799, the name of the Island was changed to that of Prince Edward Island in honour of Prince Edward, Commander-in-Chief of the forces in Nova Scotia and St. John Island.

From its first appointment in 1770 to 1839 the Council acted in both an executive and a legislative capacity, but in 1839 it was separated into an Executive Council and a Legislative Council. Both continued however to be appointed by the Crown. In 1851 when responsible government was granted to Prince Edward Island the Executive Council, which was to be increased to nine members in 1858, became responsible to the House of Assembly. The latter at this time received complete control of the public revenues and crown lands in return for granting a civil list. The Legislative Council, which was made elective in 1862, continued as a second or upper house until it merged with the House of Assembly in 1893 to form the Legislative Assembly, of thirty members, half of whom are known as Councillors and are elected by property holders, while the other half, known as Assemblymen, are elected on a general franchise.

Following is a table of Assemblies from 1773-1952, with the exception of the first four, the dates of which it has been impossible to determine, as the manuscript records cannot be located and no records were printed before 1788.

KING'S PRINTER

In 1786 when Edmund Fanning became Lieutenant-Governor, he found the governmental records unprinted and in a state of confusion. The following year Fanning was successful in inducing a printer from Halifax, James Robertson, to establish a press on the Island, with the object of printing all Statutes and Orders-in-Council previously passed. However, Robertson found that many of the documents had been lost. He contented himself therefore with printing a collection of what Statutes he could find, a copy of which Fanning forwarded to the Secretary of State. This copy may be examined in the Public Records Office, London. When Robertson found he could not live on the small salary (£60) paid to the King's Printer, he left the Island in the spring of 1789 for Quebec, thence to Britain. W. A. Rind, who had arrived on the Island of Saint John in 1788, took over Robertson's press and was made King's Printer with an annual salary of forty pounds. This office he held until he left the Island in 1798. The Island was now left without an official printer until 1805, when James Douglas Bagnall was appointed to the post.

In 1811 the duties of the office consisted in publishing the Statutes, Journals of the Councils, Journals of the House of Assembly, such reports as were authorized by the Legislature, and a newspaper which was considered semi-official in that it contained the Lieutenant-Governor's notices and proclamations. In 1832 an appendix was added to the Journals of the House of Assembly, which was to contain those items which the House ordered to be printed, such as despatches, reports of committees, etc. In 1838 the Council followed suit and added an appendix to their journals. This policy has been continued by the Legislative Assembly and a copy of the annual report of certain Departments, determined by a committee, is to be found in the appendix.

Since 1836 when a committee of the House of Assembly decided to call for tenders to publish its journals, more and more government publications have been printed by private firms, until now all publications, other than the Royal Gazette and Statutes, are handled, not by the King's Printer, but by private companies.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE

The minutes of Council, being in manuscript form, do not properly come within the jurisdiction of this study but it is of interest to note that while the Council was divided into Executive and Legislative in 1839 it was not until the Legislative Council became elective on April 19, 1862 that the title of the minutes was changed from "Minute book of meetings of Council" to "Minutes of Executive Council".

The Journals of the Council were first printed in 1827. However a manuscript copy was located dating back to 1817. While the printed copy changed its title from "Journal of His Majesty's Council" to "Journal of the Legislative Council" in 1835 it was not until 1856 that the title was changed in the manuscript copy.

While the Journal of the House of Assembly was first published in 1788, a manuscript copy was found dating back to 1785. In the latter form it bore the title of "Journal of the Honourable House of Representatives of His Majesty's Island Saint John". The Journals have been printed every year the House has been in session (see p. 98-99) since 1788 except the years 1798 to 1805 when the Island was without a King's Printer.

The idea of publishing Debates came much later. It was only in 1856 that the first Debate was published. From 1856 to 1859 the Debates of the Legislative Council and House of Assembly were published jointly under the title of Parliamentary Reporter. In 1860 the Parliamentary Reporter became the Official Debates of the House of Assembly and the Legislative Council published their Debates simply as Debates and Proceedings of the Legislative Council. In 1893 when the Legislative Council and House of Assembly merged into the Legislative Assembly the Debates ceased to be published. However since then they have been printed in the Charlottetown Guardian and Charlottetown Patriot. A copy of the Debates is maintained in scrap-book form in the Legislative Library.

The printing of the Statutes was the first task undertaken by Robertson when he set up his press. He collected those still in existence and published them in 1788. Thereafter they were published each year in which the House sat except 1798 to 1805 when the Island was without a printer, and the fourth session of the forty-sixth assembly (1950) when no laws were enacted. The first revision of the Statutes was published in 1951.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE EXECUTIVE

When Prince Edward Island was constituted a separate province the government was to consist of a Lieutenant-Governor, an appointed Council and an elected House of Assembly. Later as necessity arose Boards or Commissions were appointed to deal with particular problems. Gradually these became permanent and in 1851 when responsible government was granted, the Chairman of a Board or Commission, known as a Commissioner, became a member of the Executive Council and responsible to the House of Assembly. Eventually the Boards or Commissions were changed to Departments and the Commissioner became a Minister.

At the time of Confederation the British North America Act of 1867 transferred certain responsibilities from the provincial government to the newly formed Dominion government. Thus in 1873 when Prince Edward Island entered Confederation, the following Departments and Commissions ceased to issue publications under the seal of Prince Edward Island: Indian Commission; Militia; Post Office; Trade and Navigation. Since Confederation another Department, namely that of Public Lands, which had been organized in 1854, as a Commission of Public Lands, was dissolved in 1899 when the land question was settled.

A Development Commission, organized in 1917 and a Department of Reconstruction, organized in 1944, did not last beyond the year of organization.

More or less minor changes take place every year, certain duties being transferred from one portfolio to another. In December 1952 the composition of the government was as follows:

Lieutenant Governor

Executive Council (9 members)

President of the Executive Council, Premier, Minister of Education

Attorney and Advocate-General and Provincial Treasurer

Minister of Health and Welfare

Minister of Agriculture

Minister of Industry and Natural Resources

Provincial Secretary

Minister of Public Works and Highways

Two members without portfolio.

Legislative Assembly (30 members: 15 Councillors elected by property holders and 15 Assemblymen elected on a general franchise)

While the work of each Department is made public by the issuance of an annual report, the work of some of the Boards is reported to the government in typed copy only. Annual reports presented to the Legislative Assembly but not published are as follows: Public Utilities Board; Prince Edward Island Temperance Commission; Royal Canadian Mounted Police; Legislative and Public Library; Workman's Compensation Board; Travel Bureau; Credit Unions; and Provincial Laboratory. The annual report of the Falconwood Hospital and Provincial Sanatorium which are government supported are included with that of the Department of Health and Welfare. No attempt has been made to list the typed annual reports.

Gazettes

The first newspaper to be published on the Island was the Royal American Gazette and Weekly Intelligencer, started September 15, 1787, by James Robertson. While a large part of the paper was devoted to the proclamations of the Lieutenant-Governor and other official advertisements the paper was not classed as an official government organ. This paper ceased publication sometime between March 6, 1788 and the spring of 1790, but other newspapers followed which published official information. It was not, however, until 1851, when Edward Whelan became King's printer, that any official sanction was given to the Royal Gazette and it was only after March 8, 1873 that the paper has been continuous in its volume numbering. From 1830 to 1873 with each change of King's printer the Royal Gazette started with volume one, and there is even one instance during the printership of Edward Whelan, when half way through his term of office he started numbering the paper at volume one again. The following is a list of semi-official and official newspapers arranged in chronological order, published since 1787:

The Royal American Gazette and Weekly Intelligencer of the Island of Saint John. v.1, no. 1- September 15, 1787-March 6, 1788. Charlottetown, Printed by James Robertson, 1787-1788.

Weekly.

The last issue located was for March 6, 1788 but it is possible more were published since Robertson did not leave the Island until 1790.¹

The Royal Gazette and Miscellancy of the Island of St. John. v.1, no. 1- July 15, 1791- Charlottetown, W. A. Rind, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, 1791-Fortnightly.

A semi-official publication. When it ceased publication is not known, although there are known copies up to December 1792.

Royal Herald. v.1- 1805- Charlottetown, P.E.I., J. D. Bagnall, King's printer, 1805-

Weekly.

Did not pay as only 60 copies per week were printed. When it ceased publication is not known.

The Recorder. v.1- 1811- Charlottetown, P.E.I., J. D. Bagnall, King's printer, 1811-

Superseded by the Royal Gazette. When it ceased publication is not known.

Department of Agriculture

The first organization for the dissemination of agricultural truths, under the name of Agricultural Society was founded in 1827. Its object was three-fold: to publish agricultural information; to import improved live stock; to introduce improved seed. The Society's first report was issued in 1828 where it is shown that a grant of thirty pounds has been received from the provincial government. This grant was continued until 1865, having varied from thirty pounds to one hundred and fifty pounds.¹ In 1845 the name of the Society was changed to Royal Agricultural Society in honour of its royal patron, Prince Albert. After 1848 a gradual decline set in. By 1866 the Royal Agricultural Society had been replaced by local agricultural societies, the Stock Farm and the Exhibition Commission. By the beginning of the twentieth century centralization was desired once more and in 1901 a Department of Agriculture was formed with a Commissioner of Agriculture in charge. The old Agricultural Societies were replaced by the Farmers' Institute system. In 1924 the Commissioner of Agriculture was replaced by a Minister of Agriculture.

While the Agricultural Society issued reports as early as 1828 the first report to be printed under the authority of the government did not appear until 1865.

Department of Education

While provision for education was made with the original granting of lands in 1767 in that thirty acres was to be set aside in each township for the schoolmaster, it was not until 1821 that a national school was opened in the capital, Charlottetown.

In 1826 the first Education Act was passed, authorizing the government to pay for four years one-sixth of the teachers' salaries, and fifty pounds to each of the three counties as salaries for masters of grammar schools. Five years later the first Board of Education was appointed. In 1836 the Central Academy was officially opened, the first school absolutely free from religious tests. The following year the first official inspector of schools, to be known as School Visitor, was appointed, and an annual report on schools began to be published. No copy could be found for the years 1838-41, 1849, 1854, 1870, 1873-74. In 1875 it was ordered not to be printed. In 1876 a report was printed which included some information covering the years 1872-1876. The first report under the Public Schools Act appeared for the year 1877 and has been annual since.

The Free Education Act was passed in 1852, and provided for the payment of nearly the whole of the teachers' salaries from the provincial treasury. In 1856 the Normal School was opened in Charlottetown and in 1880 Prince of Wales College was established, replacing the Central Academy.

With the passing of the Public Schools Act in 1877, the basis of today's educational system was established.

In 1931 a Minister of Education was appointed.

Department of Health and Welfare

The need for a hospital for insane persons was voiced in the Legislature as early as 1831 but it was not until 1846 that an asylum building was erected, to house both the Lunatic Asylum and the Poor House, the latter being moved in 1869 to other quarters. The first order for the admission of patients was made by the Board of Trustees on May 1, 1847, and in 1849 the first report was published.

On June 1, 1848 the first Board of Health, known as the Central Board of Health, was organized but the work was really carried on by local Boards of Health until 1908 when a Public Health Act was passed creating a Board of Health. However no reports were published until 1929. In 1931 a Department of Health was organized with a Minister appointed, becoming on October 1, 1945 the Department of Health and Welfare, and taking over for administrative purposes: the Old Age Pensions Commission; the Public Health Act; the Children's Act; the Vital Statistics Act; the Electrical Inspection Act; Extra-mural Tuberculosis & Direct Relief payments; all government medical services and supervision of the Provincial Sanatorium.

Department of Public Lands

For over one hundred years after the Island had received separate government the question of land influenced both the political and the social life of the Island and was the cause of much bitterness. In 1767 the Island was divided among persons who had claims on the British government on the ground of military or other public services. It was not until 1873 when the Island entered Confederation that the problem of absentee landlordism was settled by reason of the Dominion government purchasing the land held by the proprietors and selling it to the tenants. However prior to this wholesale purchase of land by the Dominion government, the government of Prince Edward Island had purchased some estates. The first report dealing with land appears for 1842 in the appendix to the Journal of the House of Assembly. It was entitled "Return of cultivated and uncultivated lands in the several townships for which assessment has been paid". In 1856 the report ceased to be presented separately and became part of the report of the Colonial Treasurer. In 1843 a committee was appointed to report on the subject of Crown Lands. Two reports were made that year by the committee. From that year until 1854 a return was shown each year. In 1854 an abstract of sale of public lands was shown as part of the Colonial Treasurer's report. In 1857 a Commissioner of Public Lands was appointed. He presented a return of public lands until 1875. In 1876 a Commission was appointed to investigate the Land Office. As a result the Land Office was made into a Department to be presided over by a Commissioner. When the work of the Department was finished in 1899, the Department ceased to exist.

Department of Public Works and Highways

In 1854 the first mention of Public Works is made when there appears in the appendix to the Journal of the House of Assembly a report on Public Works. From 1860-1867 various reports appear dealing with bridge and lighthouse construction, under the heading of Superintendent of Public Works. On June 1, 1869 a Board of Works was established, with a Secretary appointed to take charge of the work. Seven years later on July 1, 1876 a Department of Public Works was established with a Commissioner being appointed as the head of the Department. The Commissioner remained in charge until 1924 when a Minister of the Department of Public Works was appointed. In 1932 the name of the Department was changed to that of Department of Public Works and Highways.

Post Office

In 1851 a Postmaster General was appointed to look after matters concerning the mails of the Island. This appointment remained in the hands of the province until Confederation, when it was taken over by the Dominion government. Each year the Postmaster General published a statement of his account with the government.

NEW BRUNSWICK

FOREWORD

Although the land which is now the province of New Brunswick was discovered by Jacques Cartier in 1534, some two hundred and fifty years were to pass before it was to be known by that name. Prior to August 16, 1784 New Brunswick was for administrative purposes considered as part of Nova Scotia or Acadia as the French had called the country. The seat of government was at Halifax. At the close of the American Revolution when so many Loyalists had to flee from the thirteen colonies they came to Parrtown (Saint John) to build new homes. Once settled they found the government in Halifax too far away to deal adequately with their complaints, and petitioned the British Parliament to be given a separate government. The petition was granted and a commission appointing Colonel Thomas Carleton Governor-in-Chief of New Brunswick was issued on the 16th of August 1784. The Bay of Fundy, the Missequash River and a line from the source of this river to Baie Verte were the southern boundaries of the province. On November 21st Carleton reached Parrtown and published his commission. The following day the first Council was held when nine members (a Provincial Secretary; a Chief Justice; three Puisne Judges; a Solicitor-General; an Attorney-General; a Surveyor-General; and a Surrogate-General) were sworn in. Although a Legislative Assembly had been provided for in the commission it was not until January 9, 1786 that one was elected. In the meantime Lieutenant-Governor Carleton, not satisfied with Parrtown as the seat of government selected St. Anne's Point, about a hundred miles up the river, as the capital, changing the name to Fredericktown in honour of the Duke of York.

The government consisted of an appointed Council and an elected Assembly, the former acting in a legislative capacity when the Assembly was in session. In 1833 the Council was divided into Executive and Legislative. Five years later a civil list bill passed the Legislature and received the Royal assent giving the Assembly control of the revenues heretofore held tight in the grasp of the provincial Executive. At the same time the Executive became responsible to the House of Assembly which "continues for five years and two months from the day of the issue of the writ for choosing the same, unless sooner dissolved by the Lieutenant-Governor; and no Legislative Assembly of this province shall be affected by the demise of the Crown; providing that unless sooner dissolved by the Lieutenant-Governor, the Legislative Assembly, if it is in session at the expiration of the term so fixed, shall continue until prorogued by the Lieutenant-Governor, and for forty days thereafter and no longer".¹ There are fifty-two seats in the Legislative Assembly. The members are elected under a general franchise.

On April 16, 1891 an act, which came into effect the following year, was passed to abolish the Legislative Council. The House of Assembly then became the Legislative Assembly.

When the name of the House of Assembly was changed to that of Legislative Assembly the numbering of the Assemblies began with one. This consecutive numbering continued until 1937 when the Assembly numbering was again changed and the number once more became continuous from 1786.

KING'S PRINTER

One of the first offices to be established upon the granting of separate government was that of King's printer. As reward for his loyalty to the British Crown in the American Revolution, in 1784 Christopher Sower was given the dual office of King's printer and Postmaster General for New Brunswick. Sower established himself on Dock Street in Parrtown where he remained until 1790 when he moved to Hammond River and there established the office of King's printer. He was responsible for all publications issued by the government. In addition to official publications the King's printer published many pamphlets such as sermons, orations for King's College, etc., under his official title. Gradually, however, the policy was changed, and reports, particularly those presented by the Departments were printed by private firms, until today the King's printer is responsible only for the Royal Gazette, the Statutes and the Synoptic Reports. Each Department is responsible for the printing and distribution of its own reports. The Clerk of the Legislature is responsible for the publication of the Journals.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE LEGISLATURE

In 1831 the Legislative Council, upon the insistent demand of the House of Assembly to know what was taking place in the Council, ordered that their Journals be published and include proceedings from the first session in 1784 to date. The Journals were published in two volumes. Thereafter until the Legislative Council's abolition in 1892 the Journals were published annually. In 1835 an appendix was added which contained the despatches, annual reports, etc., ordered to be published.

The Journal of the House of Assembly, changed to the Journal of the Legislative Assembly in 1893, has been published for each session of each Assembly since 1786. In 1831 an appendix was added. There is no definite policy as to what the appendix is to contain. A committee of the Assembly decides each year which annual reports will be included.

The debates of the Legislative Council were published only intermittently from 1852 to 1882. From 1883 until its abolition in 1892 the debates appeared only in the newspapers. The first printed debate of the House of Assembly was for the session 1837/38. Previously they had appeared rather incompletely in the newspapers of the province. The next year the House passed the following resolution: "Resolved, That this House will not in future make any provision for the payment of reporting and printing of the debates of the Assembly."¹ However in 1841 this resolution was reversed and the House resolved to report and publish its debates. They continued this policy until 1844. In 1845 the debates were reported but not published. The next two years (1846 and 1847) they were to be reported and published. From 1848 to 1850 the debates were to be reported. In 1851 they were to be published in the newspaper. From 1852 until 1862 they were published for each session except the regular one in 1856. From 1863 until 1870 (when they ceased to be published) they were published irregularly. In 1870 the debates were to be translated into French and 2,000 copies printed.² In 1874 a recommendation was accepted by the House whereby a synoptic report of the debates would be published. These were published intermittently until 1884. Since that date synoptic reports have been published for each session of the Assembly.

The statutes have been published for each session of the Assembly since 1786 except the first session of the twenty-fifth Assembly, 1883, when no laws were passed. In addition to five revisions or consolidations—as two revisions were named—three cumulations have been published.

PUBLICATIONS OF THE EXECUTIVE

When the government of New Brunswick was organized in 1784 provision was made for a Lieutenant-Governor, a Council and a House of Assembly. Gradually, as the business of government expanded, particularly after 1838 when responsible government was granted, Boards and Commissions were appointed to handle particular problems. Eventually these Boards and Commissions were made permanent with the title Commissioner being given to the chairman. When the Dominion government was created in 1867 certain problems were considered, under the British North America Act, to be Dominion rather than provincial. The following Departments were transferred to the Dominion at that time: Comptroller of Customs; Militia; Post Office; and the Railway Commission.

On March 20, 1913 an act was passed which made the following changes: "The duties heretofore performed by the Provincial Secretary and Receiver General, and Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, by the Commissioner of Public Works, by the Surveyor General, and by the Commissioner for Agriculture, shall hereafter be performed by the Provincial Secretary-Treasurer, the Minister of Public Works, the Minister of Lands and Mines, and the Minister of Agriculture respectively".¹

Certain additions or deletions are made each year in government to meet changing demands. The most noteworthy of these has been the splitting up of Departments into several divisions, each under its own Director who is responsible to the Minister of the Department concerned.

The composition of the government in December 1952 was as follows:

Lieutenant Governor

Executive Council (10 members)

Premier and Minister of Public Works

Bridge branch

Highway branch

Architectural branch

Motor vehicle branch

Gazettes

The Royal Gazette which was first published as an official organ of government in 1785 has continued under various titles down to the present day. In the early period it changed volume number and title with each King's printer but retained the words Royal Gazette in the title. In order not to break the numerical sequence they have been listed chronologically rather than alphabetically.

Department of Agriculture

The first Agricultural Society for New Brunswick was organized in Saint John in 1790. Its scope was provincial. In 1825 an Agricultural and Immigration Society was formed at Fredericton and the first agricultural report was published.

Following an agitation for some systematic provincial agricultural work, in 1849, Professor J. F. W. Johnston was invited from England to visit the province and report upon its agricultural capabilities. As a result of this report the New Brunswick Agricultural Society was formed in 1851 and the first Provincial Exhibition was held in 1853.

In 1859 a Provincial Board of Agriculture took over the work of the New Brunswick Agricultural Society and continued until it was abolished in 1875.

In 1880 a Board of Agriculture was again called into existence by the Legislature, with six of its members being appointed by the government and six nominated by agricultural societies. This Board was abolished in 1888 and its duties transferred to Secretary of Agriculture who was appointed by the government. The portfolio of Commissioner of Agriculture created in 1888 was changed to Minister of Agriculture in 1913 by an act of the Legislature. To meet changing demands the Department has been divided into a number of divisions with a Director in charge of each. In 1952 the following divisions are shown: Horticultural; Poultry; Extension; Dairy; Live Stock; Soils and Crops; Field Husbandry; Herd Improvement; Veterinary; Credit Union and Co-operative; Home Economics; Agricultural Engineering; Agricultural Education; and Plant Protection and Promotion. In addition to the annual report issued by the Minister, a number of the Directors issue publications relating to their particular work.

Department of Education

When New Brunswick became a separate province it did not at once pass legislation to establish schools but followed the rules and regulations which had been passed by the Nova Scotia Legislature in 1766. This act defined the duties and qualifications of schoolmasters as well as stated that four hundred acres of land was to be set aside in each township for the use of schools.

Many of the Loyalists, being men of education and culture, also felt the need for institutions of higher learning. Thus in 1800 the college of New Brunswick was established at Fredericton. This college later became King's College and subsequently the University of New Brunswick.

In 1805 the first grammar school was established in Saint John. In 1816 an act was passed by the Legislature authorizing one for each county of the province. The same act authorized the appointment of town or parish school trustees who were empowered to assess the inhabitants for a sum not less than thirty pounds and not more than ninety pounds a year for the establishment and maintenance of schools in each parish or town. But this power of assessment was considered too dangerous a prerogative and was withdrawn in 1818. The Legislature authorized a grant of one hundred pounds from the provincial treasury for each parish.

In 1820 the Madras system of schools was introduced into New Brunswick. This system was comparatively inexpensive. By 1824 there were 39 Madras schools attended by 4,736 pupils. The system continued until its abolition under the act of 1871 which provided for free non-sectarian education. An annual report was issued by the Governor and Trustees of the Madras schools.

By 1845 it was felt further changes were necessary and a Commission was appointed to investigate. As a result, in 1847, a new act was passed, which provided for a Board of Education consisting of the Governor and members of the Executive Council, who were empowered to establish normal and model schools, to appoint two inspectors of schools for the province and to create agencies for the sale of school books. Five years later the first Superintendent of Education was appointed. The next act, passed in 1871, was to provide for a free non-sectarian system of schools.

In 1936, while the composition of the Board of Education was not changed, a Minister was appointed and the Board came under the jurisdiction of the Department which was known as the Department of Education, Federal and Municipal Relations. Since the publications are issued either under the Department of Education or under the Department of Federal and Municipal Relations, but not jointly, they are treated under the two departments for clarity. The name of the Department of Federal and Municipal Relations was changed in 1949 to that of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

In order to meet the changing demands of education the following divisions have been organized under the Department of Education: Educational services and Chief Superintendent of Education; School services; Vocational Education; Audio and Visual Aids; and Physical Education.

Since 1820 when the first report of the Madras schools was issued, an annual report on education has been published. In addition to the annual report a number of special reports have been published.

Department of Health and Social Services

While the present title of this Department dates only from April 6th, 1944 the nucleus of the Department is to be found as far back as 1838, when the first annual report of the Provincial Lunatic Asylum was issued. On April 5th, 1887 the Provincial Board of Health of New Brunswick was established, which in 1918 became the Department of Health. When the Director of Labour was appointed in 1943 he was placed under the administration of the Minister of Health and the Department became the Department of Health and Labour. In 1944 Labour became an independent Department and Social Services were added to the Department of Health creating the Department of Health and Social Services, under whose jurisdiction the Boys' Industrial Home; Old Age Pensions and Mothers' Allowances; Hospitals owned and operated by the provincial government; Public hospitals subsidized by the New Brunswick government; and institutions subsidized by the New Brunswick government, have been placed.

Department of Labour

Some thirty years before the establishment of the Department in 1935, a Factory Inspector had been appointed to report on conditions existing in factories in New Brunswick. He issued an annual report until 1931.

In 1935 a Director of Labour was appointed, to hold office under the Minister of Health. Two years later the Department of Health became the Department of Health and Labour, continuing as such until 1944 when the Department of Labour became independent with a Minister of Labour being appointed.

On April 4, 1936 when the Fair Wage Act was passed provision was made for the appointment of a Fair Wage Officer who would be responsible to the Minister of Health and Labour.

For the more effective carrying out of its tasks the Department has established the following Board or Committees: Apprenticeship Committee; Factory Inspection and Boiler Inspector; New Brunswick Labour Relations Board; and the Minimum Wage Board.

Annual reports as well as a number of publications by the Director of Apprenticeship have been issued by the Department.

Department of Lands and Mines

In 1837 the control of Crown Lands within the province of New Brunswick was transferred from the Colonial Office in London to the Provincial Legislature. In 1860 the office was reorganized and the title was changed from Crown Land Office to the Crown Land Department, which title remained until 1913 when it became the Department of Lands and Mines, and the Surveyor General was replaced by a Minister. The Crown Land Office issued an annual return from 1837 to 1860. When it was reorganized it issued an annual report starting with volume one in 1860. However in 1938 it was decided to advance the volume number of the annual report so as to take into account the annual returns and show the department as being organized in 1837.

Recently a Photogrammetry division has been added to the Department. It however has not issued any publications.

Department of Provincial Secretary-Treasurer

The office of Provincial Secretary was among the first to be created when New Brunswick became a separate province. The duties of Receiver-General were also part of the Secretary's work, but it was not until 1913 that it became the office of Provincial Secretary-Treasurer. In 1928 the title was changed from Office to Department. In addition to the Comptrolling and Audit Branch which is responsible for issuing the annual report of Public Accounts, the Queen's printer is also under the jurisdiction of this Department. Prior to 1860 each branch of government presented its own statement of receipts and expenditures. That year all the accounts were brought together and issued as a report of the Auditor-General. Owing to the fact that in the early days the King's Printer was responsible for all government publications the duties of his office have been dealt with in a separate section.

Railway Commission

On October 5, 1835 a meeting was held at St. Andrews to discuss the building of a railway to Quebec. The following year the road was surveyed by Captain Yule of the Royal Engineers, who estimated the cost at 10,000,000 pounds sterling. This frightened the promoters, and nothing further was done for several years. By 1847 the issue came to the fore again and reports were issued giving estimates for constructing a railway and an electric magnetic telegraph through the province. By 1858 a Railway Commission was appointed and the following year the first annual report of the Commission was issued. The whole question of railways became a vital issue at the time of Confederation and on July 1, 1867 the newly formed Dominion government became responsible for the railways.
